Record Breakers. To achieve a World Land Speed Record, a car must be driven through a measured mile, turn around, refuel and return along the mile within one hour. The final speed figure is the average of the two runs, as timed by officials. The first record was set in 1898 by Chasseloup-Laubat, who drove a Jeantaud electric car at 39.24mph/63.15kph.

In 1998 athlete Linford Christie egotistically had it renamed Linford's Record Breakers before it switched back to plain ol' Record Breakers for the last series in 2001. As well as this Record Breakers also did the occasional special, focusing on one particular sport or activity (which was often – for reasons unknown – dominoes). In 1994 the team presented two Castle-based editions paying their respects to the late record king; Roy Castle Tribute Special and Record Breakers:
