This leads to several great conclusions- Salem's Lot is one of the finest vampire novels, perhaps only bettered by Dracula and I am Legend. The final novel here is The Shining, which has most definitely been superseded by Stanley Kubrick's strong (if overlong) film, particularly the camerawork and Jack Nicholson's performance.

The Shining - 5/5 A classic. Salem's Lot - 5/5 Maybe the best vampire novel ever written. Night Shift - 4/5 Enjoyable. 'I Know What You Need,' 'Gray Matter,' 'One More For the Road' and 'Sometimes They Come Back' were the standouts for me. Carrie - 5/5 If this novel doesn't break your heart you might not have a heart to begin with.

Three of the best novels Stephen King ever wrote:1) Carrie - the first. Even if you've seen the movie a hundred times, this is one creepy little novel;2) 'Salem's Lot - the scariest. King sets a mood that crawls right under your skin and stays there - heck, it moves around in there;3) The Shining - the classic.
