Have you been searching for a way to resolve conflict that doesn't involve a series of ten or more steps? Do you think that perhaps a key to conflict resolution must come from within? How can teachers and pre-service teachers help their students learn and use strategies for conflict resolution? Tools for Conflict Resolution is a practical method for teaching conflict resolution skills to students in grades K-12. Conflict is a part of everyone's life. It is the authors' belief that if each student is given tools for handling conflict, and these tools are used each time conflict arises that soon students become proficient conflict managers. This book begins with a chapter, which introduces Peter Senge's five disciplines: Personal Mastery, Mental Models, Shared Vision, Team Building, and Systems Thinking. After reading this chapter, the reader is able to embrace the five disciplines and begin practicing the adult level. As teachers, we teach from who we are. The rest of the book is filled with actual lesson plans, which are directly tied to the Multiple Intelligences Theory and are developmentally appropriate for students. Case studies, role- plays, skits, literature, songs, and co-operative learning activities are the primary instructional methods used to teach students conflict resolution skills. An annotated bibliography is included to assist teachers in extending lessons. These lessons may be taught during Social Studies as a unit on character education or could be used during a guidance class.

Learn how to engage in and resolve conflict productively to improve work relationships and create a more equitable community for children. Conflicts are inevitable, often hard to navigate, and can quickly multiply and become unmanageable. And resolving conflict requires self-reflection, understanding, and vulnerability. But knowing how to tackle difficult conversations will strengthen relationships, create a more equitable community, and improve the impact educators have on the young children they work with. The first of its kind, Finding Your Way Through Conflict specifically focuses on conflict in early childhood education settings and gives concrete steps and strategies to help manage and resolve it productively. Authors Chris Amiraull, Ph.D., and Christine M. Snyder, M.A., have decades of experience in early childhood education programs and conflict resolution. Built on their expertise and their own experiences, the book's conflict scenarios are engaging and authentic, empowering educators to get in and out of conflict in a variety of personal, organization, and cultural contexts. Some of these scenarios include: The Discombobulated Team: The children's artwork you posted in the classroom yesterday is gone. Who took it down—and why? The Intent/Impact Disagreement: You were only trying to help! So why is that parent offended? The Unexpected Disaster: Your team planned every aspect of that difficult parent meeting for days. So why was it such a catastrophe? A free PLC/Book Study Guide is available at freespirit.com/plc.

If so, you are going to love Say What's Wrong and Make It Right. Say What's Wrong and Make It Right is an easy-to-learn, hands-on approach to conflict resolution. This process encourages and develops responsibility, assertive communication, and problem-solving skills in children . . . and adults as well. Thirty years of honing and field testing with thousands of children in and out of the classroom have provided the foundation for Say What's Wrong and Make It Right. Parents, educators, and counselors report: - "Our total family communication has improved as a result of using Say What's Wrong and Make It Right." - "Even our youngest students are working toward talking through their problems rather than looking for an adult to solve them."

Over the last three school years, horrific acts of violence have taken place in America's public schools. The reality of children killing children has sparked a national debate over school violence and what can be done to prevent it. As an educator, I have been deeply affected by these episodes of school violence. After watching newscasts of a middle school shooting in Jonesboro, Arkansas, I decided that teaching conflict resolution would have to be a priority in my classroom. My challenge was to create a project that my students would find interesting, motivational, and meaningful. Because of curriculum demands, the project had to teach conflict resolution strategies as well as basic literacy skills such as reading, writing, editing, speaking, listening, and viewing. I decided to have my class produce a video, called Choose Peace. The students' goal was to create skits describing how to solve everyday conflicts without using violence. The activity required students to integrate their literacy skills with their newly gained conflict resolution strategies. The purpose of this study is to examine how elementary students' perceptions of violence change after participating in a conflict resolution/literacy program. The study will only assess whether students' perceptions changed, not whether the students integrated these conflict resolution strategies into their real lives. The project was conducted in a heterogeneously grouped fourth grade classroom. Of the twenty-five students in the classroom fourteen were boys and eleven were girls. Eight of the students were identified as having special needs. The community in which the school is located is made up of primarily working-class families. All students involved with the activity participated in two series of interviews, one before working on the project, and one after. The interviews were transcribed and video taped. The examiner then compared the data collected in the two sets of interviews, noting any changes in perceptions after participating in the project. The data was also analyzed for any gender differences in perceptions of violence. The examiner also took field notes throughout the activity, paying special attention to how students reacted to conflicts during the creation of the video. There were indeed differences between boys' and girls' perceptions of violence. When confronted with a conflict, boys were more likely to react spontaneously than girls were. On the whole, boys were more likely to run away or react violently to conflict situations. On the other hand, girls were more likely to talk out their problems, look for a solution, and apologize when involved in a conflict. They were much less likely to use violence than boys were. The study proved that students' perceptions of violence did change after participating in the conflict resolution program. After making the video, students had a much clearer understanding of what violence was. They were able to name more places where violence occurs, reasons for violent behavior, and ways to solve problems without using violence. Students were very aware of the presence of violence in the world and understood the negative consequences of violent behavior. The project was extremely successful. Not only did it meet its objective of integrating conflict resolution into the language arts curriculum, but it allowed the students to develop problem solving and higher order thinking skills. The students were actively involved in their own learning, and it was evident that they did begin to internalize some of the strategies discussed in class.

For use with upper elementary and middle school students. Imagine a school or classroom where learners manage and resolve their own conflicts, where students and teachers cooperate, where diversity is celebrated, where feelings are expressed in ways that are neither aggressive nor destructive, where responsibility is the norm. Creating the Peaceable School presents a workable plan for achieving this vision. Through the conflict resolution strategies of mediation, negotiation, and group problem solving, students learn to recognize, manage, and resolve conflicts in peaceful, noncoercive ways. The Student Manual is a workbook that summarizes important concepts and contains a variety of forms and worksheets designed to reinforce learning.
