Eleemosynary is a multi act play by Lee Blessing [1]. Plus, I learned the definition of, and how to spell, "eleemosynary". The structure is something I'd like to see performed before I am convinced it works, because too often it reads like difficult exposition handled in a simplistic way, but this is largely offset by the unity of conflict inside the difficult relationships of intra-generational women.

In Eleemosynary playwright Lee Blessing, like he does in all his work, celebrates the joy of language and its intrinsic power to create storms of imagery. In this short, elliptical and direct play which demands a symbolic staging, Blessing gives us three generations of Westbrook women- a unique family blessed (and cursed) with supreme intelligence and eccentricity.

Eleemosynary is a one-act play by playwright Lee Blessing about three women and how their lives intersect and affect each other. I played Echo, the youngest of the three; her mother is Artie and her grandmother is Dorothea. The play takes place in 1985 and is non-linear in structure. It alternates between scenes in the present in which the characters are speaking directly to the audience, and scenes in various points of the past. Echo is raised almost entirely by Dorothea and so she has a strained relationship with her mother, Artie. After Dorothea dies, Echo is forced to reconcile her feelings about Artie and their relationship. The set and costumes in our production (and presumably most others) were extremely simplistic in order to reflect the simplistic, non-linear nature of
