Theories of law and justice. For the purpose of these notes the term 'law' refers not only to the substantive law, whether developed in the courts, by Parliament or from other sources, but also to procedural rules and principles by which the laws themselves are made and the legal system administered. Justice is a concept that can be described simply by a synonym such as fairness, equality or even-handedness.

Difference Between Law and Justice. The concepts of law and justice are often confused and misinterpreted by many. While the two are strictly connected, they are not the same thing. Justice is a broad concept that is based on equality of rights, fairness and morality. Conversely, law is a body of regulations and standards set up by governments and international bodies and is (or should be) based on the idea of justice.

Recognizing these facts, the series on Law, Justice and Power takes a broad view of legal scholarship. It publishes books by social scientists, humanists and legal academics which connect an understanding of culture's normative ideals with examination of the complex ways that law works in the world, insist that justice is inseparable from social practices and analyze law as one form of power, one way of constituting, controlling and changing the social world.
