Lectures On International Trade

Summary. This textbook by two eminent theorists of international trade presents the most integrated and ambitious treatment of the subject available to date. It has evolved over several years of lectures to graduate students at major campuses such as MIT, Yale, and Columbia. While it is primarily addressed to graduate-level courses, it can also be easily adapted to upper-level undergraduate use, since the exposition starts from basic principles.

6 lecture notes on international trade Proof. Let  $X, C, p, u$  be output, consumption, price and utility in a free-trade equilibrium while we use superscript  $A$  for corresponding autarky variables. The core inequality we have to prove is the following:  $e(p, u^A) p^A C^A = p^A X^A = e(p, u)$  where  $e(p, u) := \min_{C \in C} \{u(C) \mid u^A \text{ denotes the minimum expenditure function.}$

Now, you don't literally get economies of scope, because each person's doing their own thing. But it acts as if the economy as a whole is yielding economies of scope, because basically, by specializing, you're allowing the economy as a whole to benefit from people doing what they're best at.

Lecture 19: International Trade: Welfare and Policy ...

This course will analyze the causes and consequences of international trade and investment. We will investigate why nations trade, what they trade, and who gains (or not) from this trade. We will then analyze the motives for countries or organizations to restrict or regulate international trade and study the effects of such policies on economic welfare.
