This chapter illustrates the threshold concepts, privilege and oppression, particularly institutional structures that shape our individual experiences, and how activism, agency, and advocacy—as well as the action of feminist allies—can challenge and ultimately change those structures. The concepts of privilege and oppression provide a fundamental framework for understanding how power operates in society.

Threshold concepts come up time and time again in many topics and so prove useful in helping students to assimilate new information into growing schema. For example the concept that physical processes create and change environments comes up in topics such as rivers (in which case it is erosion and deposition that is the process); volcanoes (in which plate tectonics is the process); coasts (erosion and deposition) etc.
