Destined to be a full-length animated film: HERMIE, a hermit crab, plays a key role in the life of the family of four who adopted him. He realizes his new life makes a profound difference in all their lives. Laughing, crying, working, and playing together makes all of the difference, thus, a family. Shared responsibility is the major focus of this delightful "saga." Born into a family of educators, the author recorded sixty years of tales. Having attended a one-room school for two years, taught by her father, then again as her seventh grade teacher, and later as her principal, she gleaned countless lessons. Married forty-five years, with a daughter, son, daughter-in-law, and a granddaughter, she has pursued a rewarding lifestyle. Among her accomplishments, being a published poet, she acknowledges ten awards from the American Family Institute, as well as a "Who's Who in America's Teachers." Her teaching career at the private K-12 York Country Day School in York, Pennsylvania-as well as twenty years in public education-further enhanced her repertoire. Hermie tales have been written for forty years. Based on true experiences of her family adopting their first hermit crab, she has documented many, many instances that have kept the family laughing and oftentimes crying together.

In LANDSCAPES OF DISSENT, Sand and Boykoff remind us that there is a long history and ripe presence of intersections between poetry and politics. David Harvey is quoted in these pages as saying that public space is 'decisive.' In an age in which alienation is among our most prevalent health hazards, LANDSCAPES OF DISSENT demonstrates that poetry may be newly, again, good for you. This book is a gift. Take the power"--Carol Mirakove.
