Robert Venturi Excerpts From Complexity And Contradiction

Robert Venturi in Complexity and Contradiction in Architecture addresses architecture as the only place where redundant and simple construction, in thinking and in material reality, takes shape. All other art forms indulge and promote complexity in their art form especially in the multiplicity that occurs in poetry, fine art and even mathematics, which build on the multitude of possibilities to creating the art.

Complexity and Contradiction in Architecture

Even though Complexity and Contradiction was not really a book about urbanism, it was again Scully who pointed out that underlying Venturi's argument was an essentially urban understanding of concave space, as opposed to Le Corbusier's interest in the plasticity of volumes: "Le Corbusier's great teacher was the Greek temple, with its isolated body white and free in the landscape, its luminous austerities clear in the sun. [ ] Venturi's primary inspiration would seem to have come ...

11. This double identity is not wholly foreign to Venturi's work. In Complexity and Contradiction in Architecture, his so-called "gentle manifesto" of 1966, Venturi opens with a subjective statement of principles: "I am for richness of meaning rather than clarity of meaning; for the implicit function as well as the explicit function. . ." (Venturi, 1966) Then, over the following pages, such statements fade into a series of close visual analyses.
