As Means of Divine Grace, Wesley understood the sacraments as more than just outward obedience. Through the application of, and participation in, the sacramental act Wesley believed that grace could be received. Hence, Wesley looked upon Baptism as: "An outward and visible sign of an Inward and spiritual grace."

Catholic theology. According to the Catholic Church, the means of grace that Christ entrusted to the Church are many. They include the entirety of revealed truth, the sacraments and the hierarchical ministry. Among the principal means of grace are the sacraments (especially the Eucharist), prayers and good works. The sacramentals also are means of grace. ...

The sacraments are mysteries in that we cannot explain fully what God accomplishes through them. We do know, however, that they are more than memorial observations. They become effectual means of grace to those with faith by the working of the Holy Spirit (WLC, Q. 161). To downplay their importance is to desupernaturalize our holy religion, so let us have a high view of the sacraments as confirming signs of God's Word.

"A sacrament properly speaking is that which is ordained to signify our sanctification. In which three things may be considered, viz., the very cause of our sanctification, which is Christ's passion; the form of our sanctification, which is grace and the virtues; and the ultimate end of our sanctification, which is eternal life. And all these are
