Structure of decision: The cognitive maps of political elites

Structure of Decision is an edited volume of chapters assembled by Robert Axelrod about the importance of "cognitive maps" of political elites in various decision-making settings. Cognitive maps are representations of the causal beliefs of individual decision makers. Much of the book deals with the methods used to estimate cognitive maps and to analyze them. There are several chapters authored by the editor, one of which deals with an empirical case study of the decisions of the "Persian ...

Cognitive Structures: What They Are and Why They Matter Imagine what it would be like to sit in a classroom and have nothing make sense. There are far too many students in our schools today who don't have to imagine this, even though today's schools are filled with dedicated teachers working hard and using research-based instructional practices in an effort to help their students learn.
