Running Records allow you to assess reading behavior as students read from developmentally appropriate texts. They are used most often at the earlier stages of reading to monitor reading behavior and progress.

About Running Records | Reading A-Z

Running records are used to collect information on young readers who are still reading aloud and working on basic skills (think: those who are at reading levels aa-J). A running record captures both how well a student reads (the number of words they read correctly) and their reading behaviors (what they say and do as they read).
