Metals objects were introduced as money around 5000 B.C. By 700 BC, the Lydians became the first in the Western world to make coins. Metal was used because it was readily available, easy to work with, and could be recycled. Soon, countries began minting their own series of coins with specific values.

The History of the Man-Made Invention of Money

The invention of money - discussed last week by Julia Ott - is one of the greatest of all human inventions, comparable to the invention of the wheel, if not quite up to the discovery of fire. If we situate this invention in the context of the class we can see why: money is necessary for abstraction, which is the essence of capitalism, and the source of its revolutionary potential.
