I just got finished with reading Soha Ali Khan's newly launched book titled "The Perils of Being Moderately Famous" which is a collection of humorous stories on her life, family, as a child, growing up & as she calls herself being 'moderately famous'. Also, I would personally call it visual storytelling because of the expressive pictures inside the book helped me recognize her entire family and relate to her more.

Here's an exclusive excerpt Bangla Bolte Paro? from Soha Ali Khan's upcoming biography, The Perils Of Being Moderately Famous. If Uttam Kumar was her crush in the 1960s then my grandmother's twenty-first-century crush was undoubtedly Aamir Khan. When I told her I had bagged a role in Rang De Basanti she said she wanted to come to the set to meet Aamir.
