Poem: The Race
How does suggesting race as a story that poems can tell influence what this poem looks or sounds like on the page? Think about conversational language, line breaks, and diction. Chart Alexander ' s use of racially inflected language; think about allusions and theoretical language for talking about race, as well as descriptive words.

'The Race' describes my first season on the road racing circuit. Demonstrating the mixed emotions, feelings, pain and triumph associated with my first win. Cycling is a sport where races are played out moment by moment, no one is ever sure of the result until you cross the line.

'The Race' Poem
Poem: The Race by D.H. (Dee) Groberg. I like the poem " The Race " by D. H. Groberg because it is so very applicable to all aspects of life, including mission preparation and mission life. We all fall down in the race of life: we make mistakes, and we fall into sin and error. But we all have a Father in Heaven cheering us on, encouraging us, and helping us to get up each time we fall.

The Race Poem
The time you won your town the race. We chaired you through the market-place; Man and boy stood cheering by, And home we brought you shoulder-high. To-day, the road all runners come, Shoulder-high we bring you home, And set you at your threshold down, Townsman of a stiller town. Smart lad, to slip betimes away.

A Shropshire Lad 19: The time you won your town the race
Humanity may be its own biggest threat, But the human race is not gone yet. There are those who will never give in, And be so influenced by all of this sin. If you search and follow your heart, There ' s a chance we can make a new start. The world can be a much better place. If we can all unite as one human race.
