On Sunday 18th June 1815, near the village of Waterloo just south of Brussels, three armies converged to fight one of the most decisive battles in European history. It was also one of the bloodiest, and in the words of the victorious British general the Duke of Wellington, 'a damned near-run thing'. It has been a damned nice thing — the nearest run thing you ever saw in your life. The history of a battle, is not unlike the history of a ball. Waterloo is one of my favourite battles in history and I have read a ton of books on it but the three best and must haves are Bernard Cornwell's non-fiction book, Barbero's The Battle, and A Near Run Thing. If you want a Waterloo book that is not overwhelming detail but still enough for you to learn about the battle, and a dang good read, this is that book.
