During the Renaissance and Baroque periods, princes, rulers, and scholars set up their “Kunst and Wunderkammer”: collectors rooms in which precious artworks (artificialia), rare phenomena of nature (naturalia), scientific instruments (scientifica), objects from strange worlds (exotica) and inexplicable items (mirabilia) were preserved. They served to demonstrate the wealth and power of the owner and reflected the standard of knowledge and view of the world at that time.

Wunderkammer | Visionnaire Home Philosophy

In the Renaissance and in the Baroque period, rulers, princes, and scholars established Kunst- and Wunderkammern: rooms in which precious artworks (artificialia), rare natural objects (naturalia), scientific instruments (scientificia), objects from exotic lands (exotica), and natural marvels that sparked wonder (mirabilia) were displayed. These collections reflected the power and the wealth of the owner as well as mirrored the worldview and state of knowledge at the time.

Little by little, though, the idea of cataloguing began to emerge, which at first entailed the distinction between three macro-categories known as naturalia, artificialia and mirabilia, later to be refined and expanded in different other classes

Wunderkammer Reborn - Part I - Bizzarro Bazar REVIEWS. Naturalia et Artificialia, exhibition curated by Dimora Artica in Ca' Marsala, wonderful apartment located in the city centre of Bologna, is thought as an occasion to reflect on the relation between private spaces and artistic productions, between creative piece and natural forms, between what is ordinary and what is, instead, surprising. Part of Bologna's Design Week, this exhibition is a visionary space in which Dimora Artica collects eleven art
